

Ohio Air National Guard launches new website

For Immediate Release

Dec. 2, 2004

Columbus, Ohio –Today the Ohio National Guard launched a new website designed to inform the public at large about the Ohio Air National Guard. The website, created by Staff Sgt. Jay Calvin of the 121st Air Refueling Wing, is packed with information on the mission, purpose and location of each Wing in the Ohio Air National Guard. This easy to navigate site also includes information on the benefits of joining the Ohio Air National Guard as well as the economic and community impact of Ohio Air National Guard bases in local communities.

“The Ohio Air National Guard is proud of the tradition of excellence it has built over the years by providing highly trained personnel and equipment that responds when called...we hope you enjoy our web site and encourage you to find out more about the Ohio Air National Guard because we believe it’s a great organization and a great way to serve our state and nation,” said Brig. Gen Richard Green, Assistant Adjutant General for Air and Commander of the Ohio Air National Guard.
